

We Parted.

Two by the railing
That drops above the pool;
The glow of the sunset
On the dusky shore beyond.

We parted near the furnace door,
With fingers fast entwined,
While the steaming sun went down before,
And the moon rose up behind.

We parted in the quiet hour,
We could not say "farewell,"
Our tears dropped down on grass and flower,
And glided where they fell.

Our bitter tears fell fast, we sigh;
But never a word we said;
I wonder if the daisies died,
On which they had been laid.

We parted as the crimson light
Just faded from the sky;
When half the sky was still bright,
And all the world at rest.

We parted—parted—nevermore,
In fear or stormy weather,
To meet again by sea or shore,
Or face the sun together.

And if I knew that you would live,
No more upon my sight,
How gladly would I close my eyes
And say my prayers to-night!

Sherman's Campaign.

The official report of Major General Sherman of the operations of the army under his command from the time he left Savannah until he reached Goldsboro has been published. It is dated at Goldsboro on the 4th inst. The details and results of this most remarkable campaign are detailed with a modesty and clearness which characterized all of Sherman's acts previous to allowing himself to be beaten in diplomacy, from some so far unexplained cause, by BRECKINRIDGE and other traitors. The report is entirely too long for publication in our crowded columns, but the following extracts, showing beyond doubt that the rebels themselves fear the capital of South Carolina, will repay perusal:

Gen. Howard effected a crossing of the Saluda, near the factory, on the 16th, skirmishing with cavalry, and the same night made a flying bridge across Broad river, about three miles above Columbia, by which he crossed over Stone's bridge of Wood's division, 15th corps. Under cover of this bridge a pontoon bridge was laid on the morning of the 17th. I was in person at this bridge, and at 11 a. m. I learned that the mayor of Columbia had come out in a carriage and made a formal surrender of the city to Colonel Stone, 25th Iowa infantry, commanding 3rd brigade, 1st division, 15th corps.

About the same time a party of the 17th corps had crossed the Congaree in a skiff, and entered Columbia from a point immediately west. In anticipation of the occupation of the city, I had made written orders to General Howard touching the conduct of the troops. These were to destroy absolutely all arsenals and public property not needed for our own use, as well as all railroads, depots, and machinery useful in war to an enemy, but to spare all dwellings, colleges, asylums, schools, and harmless private property. I was the first to cross the pontoon bridge, and in company with General Howard, rode into the city. The day was clear, but a perfect tempest of wind was raging. The brigade of Colonel Stone was already in the city, and was properly posted. Citizens and soldiers were on the streets and general good order prevailed. General Wade Hampton, who commanded the Confederate rear guard of cavalry, had in anticipation of our capture of Columbia, ordered all his artillery, public and private, to be moved into the streets and fired, to prevent our making use of it. Bales were piled every where, the rope and bagging cut and bits of cotton were blown about in the wind lodged in the trees and against houses, so as to resemble a snow storm. Some of these piles of cotton were burning, especially one in the very heart of the city near the court house, but the fire was partially subdued by the labor of our soldiers. During the day the 15th corps passed through Columbia and out on the Camden road. The 17th did not enter the town at all, and as I have before stated, the left wing and cavalry did not come within the limits of the town.

Before one single public building had been fired by order, the smoldering fire, set by Hampton's order, were rekindled by the wind, and communicated to the buildings around. About dark they had begun to burn, and beyond the control of the brigade on duty within the city. The whole of Wood's division was brought in, but it was found impossible to check the flames, which, by midnight, had become unmanageable, and reached until about 4 a. m., when the wind subsided, they were got under control. I was up nearly all night, and saw General Howard, Logan, Woods, and others, laboring to save houses and public buildings, and suddenly General Wade Hampton with having burned his own city of Columbia, not with a malicious intent, or as the manifestation of a silly "Roman patriotism," but from folly and want of sense, in filling it with his cotton bales, and in setting them and men on duty worked well to extinguish the flames; but others, not on duty, including the officers who had long been imprisoned there, rescued by us, may have assisted in spreading the fire after it had begun to burn, and have indulged in uncontrolled joy to see the ruin of the capital of South Carolina. During the 18th and 19th the arsenal, railroad depots, machine shops, foundries, and other buildings were properly destroyed by detailed working parties, the railroad track torn up and destroyed down to Kingsville and the Wateree bridge, and up in the direction of Winnsboro.

After detailing the facts in regard to the strategy by which Johnston, Beauregard, and other rebel generals were compelled to abandon position after position, and were finally defeated, Sherman thus alludes to the conference at City Point with the lamented president and General Grant:

It was all important that I should have an interview with the general in chief, and, promising that he could not at this time leave City Point, I left General Sherman in chief command, and proceeded with all expedition by rail to Morehead City, and then by steamer to City Point, reaching General Grant's headquarters in the evening of the 27th of March. I had the good fortune to meet General Grant, the president, Gen. Meade, and Ord, and others of the army of the Potomac, and soon learned the general state of the military world, from which we had been so long separated. We were at City Point in a great measure cut off since January. Having completed all necessary business, I embarked on the navy steamer Bat, Captain Barnes, which Admiral Porter placed at my command, and returned via Hatteras Inlet and Newbern, reaching my own headquarters in Goldsboro during the night of the 30th. During my absence full supplies of clothing and food had been brought to camp, and all things were working well. I have thus rapidly sketched the progress of our campaign from Savannah to Goldsboro, but for more minute details must refer to the reports of subordinate commanders and staff officers, which are not yet ready, but will in due season be forwarded and filed with this report.

I cannot even, with any degree of precision, recapitulate the vast amount of injury done to the enemy, or the quantity of guns and military stores captured and destroyed. In general terms we have traversed the country from Savannah to Goldsboro, with an army of forty miles, consuming all the forage, cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, and all kinds of supplies from that region to feed their armies, will be compelled to send provisions from other quarters to feed their inhabitants. A map herewith, prepared by my own engineer, Col. Fox, with the routes of the 4th corps and cavalry, will show at a glance the country traversed. Of course the abandonment to us of the enemy of the whole southeast from Savannah to Newbern, North Carolina, with its forts, dock yards, gunboats, &c., was a necessary incident to our occupation and destruction of the inland routes of travel and supply. But the real object of this march was to place the army in a position easy of supply, whence it could take an appropriate part in the spring and summer campaign of 1865. This was completely accomplished on the 21st by the junction of the three armies and occupation of Goldsboro.

The report concludes with thanks for all, as follows:

In conclusion, I beg to express in the most emphatic manner my entire satisfaction with the tone and temper of the whole army. Nothing seems to dampen their energy, zeal, or cheerfulness. It is impossible to conceive a march involving more labor and exposure, yet I cannot recall an instance of bad temper by the way, or hearing an expression of doubt as to our perfect success in the end. I believe that this cheerfulness and harmony of action reflects upon and concerns quite as much real honor and fame as "battles gained" or "cities won," and I therefore commend all, general, staff, officers, and men, for these high qualities, in addition to the more soldierly ones of obedience to orders and the alacrity they have always manifested when danger summoned them to the front.

to treat and cure Private Diseases, in all their species, stages, ramifications and phases.

Dr. Wm. Thomson will give to each patient a personal examination, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

Dr. Wm. Thomson has made the treatment of Private Diseases a specialty since the year 1831—three years in the city of Buffalo, N. Y., eight years in Chicago, Ill., and twenty years in Florida, Ill. During eight years practice in Chicago, Ill., he cured over thirteen thousand cases.

Dr. Wm. Thomson, in his practice for Scrophulous, Rheumatic and general diseases of the blood, was a Purgative Laxative of the most ingenious kind, in combination with internal treatment.

This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost untold extent, producing with varying certainty the following train of morbid symptoms unless combated by scientific medical measures: viz. Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, paleness of complexion, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furrowed tongue, night sweats, febrile breath, coughs, consumption, meningitis, and frequent insanity.

The afflicted, on the first appearance of any of the above symptoms, should immediately apply to Dr. Wm. Thomson for relief.

MANHOOD!

How Destroyed, How Restored.

Dr. N. S. PENDERY,

Physician and Surgeon,

No. 24 1-2 E. Washington St.

IN CONNECTION WITH THE GENERAL PRACTICE

of Medicine, I treat by a new and reliable method, and with the happiest results, all forms of diseases of the Nervous, Seminal and Urinary and Sexual systems.

Young men with hollow cheeks and pallid countenance, telling in fearful language the silent working of some formidable disease, underrunning your constitution, destroy and reason, hurrying you to a premature death, reflect while reason holds sway and avail yourself of a treatment that dispels the disease, restores health, and cures the harassing weakness and other causes of serious difficulty and perpetual annoyance.

Spermatorrhea, Seminal Weakness, Neurasthenia, Sexual Impotency, Impotency of Self-Abuse, and their results—Inability to Consummate the Marriage Contract, Mental and Physical Prostration, Epilepsy, Insanity and Consumption.

"The foe,"

Like a stealthy thief, steals through your life, and preaches him close through every pore of life.

For a time, once the track has been set, he will follow at last to the tremendous verge.

Likewise, I will guarantee a radical cure of Syphilis, Gonorrhea, and all their stages, entirely removing from the blood the last sparks of these terrible diseases that so gradually burn up the fountain of life.

As wide spread as the continent of North America. But the glory of his life remains to be attained in his discovery, or rather combination, for he does not claim to have been the discoverer of CEDRON, which is the basis of the Bitters now offered to the public. That honor belongs to the native inhabitants of Central America, to whom its virtues have been known for more than two hundred years. Armed with it, the Indian holds defiance to the most deadly malaria and handles without fear the most venomous snakes, a belief with them, that while there is breath in the body the Cedron is potent to cure, no matter what the lesion may be.

While Dr. Bull is not prepared to endorse this extravagant pretension, he is nevertheless satisfied from thorough examination of the evidence relating to its virtues, that as a remedy and preventative of all diseases arising from exposure, either to change of weather or climate, or to miasmatic influences, it stands

WITHOUT A RIVAL!

And justly deserves the reputation it has so long enjoyed in Central America and the West Indies.

IN DYSPEPSIA

And its attendant train of symptoms, it acts more like a CHARM than a medicine. There is nothing in the whole range of Materia Medica that can for a moment bear a comparison with it in this disease.

A full account of this wonderful plant may be found in the 11th edition of the U. S. Dispensary, pages 1387 and 1388.

A series of experiments in which Dr. Bull has been for years engaged, has just been brought to a successful termination, and he is now enabled to offer to the public the whole preserved in the best quality of copper distilled Bourbon Whisky, which he is confident has a equal in the world.

He might furnish a volume of certificates, but he has long since learned to estimate such as their true value. The safest plan is for every one to test for himself the virtues of a new medicine.

The Latest and Most Important Discovery
